Woodwork

Some of our most popular chairs just got new legs, in beautiful wood. It's a small change that makes a big difference, in an all natural way.

We would also like to present our new models on the same wooden theme. Welcome to take a closer look at products that offers a place to rest
- for both eyes, body and mind.

Bombito

by Jonas Lindvall

With a lot of different varieties,
Bombito is a given source of diversity.
The new idea to give it wooden legs felt like a natural step forward.

Isa

by Louise Hederström

Isa was launched as a generous seat with the sense of a rolling landscape.
With wooden legs it's ready to get rooted!

Primo

by Stefan Borselius

A chair that is a sculpture that is a jewel in the room... It also offers the greatest comfort and now, with a new wooden stand, Primo appears to be even more of a classic.

Jeffersson

by Alexander Lervik

On the designer Alexander Lerviks' first sketches for the Jeffersson armchair, it had wooden legs.

So even if we are now updating the series, it really feels like we are just reverting to the original!

Deli

by Thomas Pedersen

Sometimes you want to elevate yourself without losing the comfort of sitting comfortably... The barstool Deli keeps its soft seat, organic form and natural wood stand, but brings it all up to a higher level.

deciBel

by Ruud Ekstrand

What are we supposed to do with a chair that has become a favourite in no time? Praise it to the skies! So the popular deciBel was raised up to a barstool in two levels, and at the same time we made a table to go with the lower original chair.
